French Zone School Keeps Gravestones For Steps

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy, at Frankfort, Germany, has called the attention of André François-Poncet, French High Commissioner, to a confirmed report that a stairway constructed of headstones from Jewish cemeteries was being used at a children's school in Coblenz in the French zone.

In writing to the French official, Mr. McCloy expressed the incredulity and enclosed photographs in which the inscriptions on the gravestones were discernible. Continuous use of these stairs would lead to violent sentiments both in the United States and France, Mr. McCloy declared.

The school, attended by children three to six years old, was built before the war, but had been bombed out and a temporary wooden structure put in its place. The stairway, however, remained. Recently, a series of incidents in which headstones in Jewish cemeteries throughout Germany had been overturned, aroused the country. However, it was pointed out that the stones on this particular staircase originally had been put in at the time of its construction.

Subsequent to Mr. McCloy's complaint, the inscriptions were stripped off. But a new set of photographs showed that the stones still were there.

Eight Groups Are No More By Mass Move To Israel

Jewish communities in four Communist countries and two Moslem nations have been virtually dispersed through mass immigration to Israel, according to Yehoshua Shye, Director General of Israel's Ministry of Immigration. He said the Government considered the Jewish communities of Germany, Austria, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Yemen and Cyrenaica liquidated. This meant all Jews in those countries who wished to migrate to Israel had been moved.

Small minorities preferred to remain in each of those countries, but some of these may go to Israel later. The Government was not barring entry to those having second thoughts, Mr. Shye said, but organized transfers have been completed.

In Germany where 35,000 Jews remained, the Jewish Agency for Palestine was shutting down its offices. Hereafter Jews there wishing to move to Israel would have to make their own arrangements and pay their own expenses. At present the bulk of immigrants is coming from Rumania, which supplied 40 per cent of the total in July. Iraq's Jewish community, which is being liquidated, accounted for 22 per cent during the past two months, says the New York Times.

To Sell Holdings Of Absentee Arabs And Germans

Machinery for the liquidation of property in Israel belonging to absentee Arabs and Germans will be set up soon by the Israeli Government, following the passage of legislation for the establishment of a development authority.

The property is held by Government-appointed custodians. Under a series of laws enacted earlier, the Custodian of Absentees' Property and the Custodian of Enemy Property had been empowered to sell the holdings to a state development authority. The new legislation permits the Development Authority to dispose of the property.

The proceeds from the sale of German property will be used as security for compensation accruing to Israelis from Germany and German institutions, while the income from the sale of Arab property will be used in the financial settlement accompanying the final peace treaty with the Arab states.

Twenty-five thousand acres of expensive urban property will be sold by the Development Authority to private buyers. Part of this will be offered abroad. The sales are expected to net Israel large sums of money, including foreign exchange to help the nation out of its financial difficulties.

According to the new law, the bulk of the land may be transferred only to the state, the Jewish National Fund, local authorities or to a Government institution to be set up for the resettlement of Arab refugees. These institutions would exploit the property for development projects, or lease parcels to groups or individuals for farming, housing projects and industrial enterprises calculated to benefit [illegible] the New York

Ben-Gurion Warns U.S. Zionists Not To Alienate Non-Zionists

An attempt to correct any misunderstanding that may exist between the Jews of the United States and those of Israel was made by Premier David Ben-Gurion at a luncheon given for Jacob Blaustein, chairman of the American Jewish Committee. The organization, which is non-Zionist, has supported Israel and for a half century has acted for the protection of Jewish rights throughout the world.

The relative position of non-Zionists and Zionists vis-a-vis the state apparently has caused confusion in some minds. Several sections of Jewish communities in the United States have wondered where they stand. Mr. Ben-Gurion's statement some months ago that only those Jews taking part in the operation of the state would have a voice in its future caused apprehension among these groups, reports the New York Times.

"It is most unfortunate that some confusion and misunderstanding have arisen as regards the relationship between Israel and since our state came into being, Jewish communities abroad, in particular that of the United States," the Premier said. "These misunderstandings are likely to alienate sympathies and create disharmony where friendship and close understanding are a vital necessity. The Jews of the United States as a community and as individuals have only one political attachment, and that is to the United States of America. They owe no political allegiance to Israel."

Mr. Ben-Gurion recalled that the first statement made before the United Nations by the Israeli representative had been to the effect that the new state spoke only on behalf of its own citizens, and in no way presumed to represent Jews who were citizens of other countries.

"We have no desire to interfere in any way with the internal affairs of Jewish communities

Did Much To Save Refugees In France

Rabbi Morris J. Jacobovits, as-

Jewish refugees, died at his home, 530 Audubon Avenue, after a brief illness. His age was 59.

Born in Lackenbach, Austria, he attended the Bratislava Talmudical Academy. Rabbi of a congregation in Cologne, Germany, and later one in Strasbourg, France, he served early in the Second World War as a chaplain in the French Army.

From 1940 to 1942, working with the French Underground and with various American relief organizations, both Jewish and non-Jewish, as well as with many French farmers, Rabbi Jacobovits devoted his efforts to helping adults and children. By the use of disguises, false papers and other devices, many were smuggled from the country, and others were hidden on farms, in private homes and in camps created for that purpose under false titles of non-existent organizations.

In October, 1942, the rabbi, his

W.J.C. To Supervise Graves Of Nazi Victims

The World Jewish Congress announced that it was preparing a plan for the international supervision of the cemeteries of Jewish victims of Nazism in Germany. The announcement, made by Dr. Israel Goldstein, chairman of the Western Hemisphere Branch of the WJC Executive, followed an exchange of communications between the WJC and the U.S. Department of State. The WJC in a letter to the Department of State on July 24 proposed international supervision. John Hay, Acting Director of the Office of German Political Affairs, of the State Department, replied that "In the absence of details as to how such an organization would be constituted and how it would function, we are unable to state whether an organization such as

Leader Of World ORT Aided DP In Camps

Dr. David Lvovitch, chairman of the executive committee of the World O. R. T. Union, died in Paris of a stroke. He was 68 years old. A native of Russia, Dr. Lvovitch became a citizen of the U.S. in 1939. Although he maintained a residence in the Peter Stuyvesant Hotel, he had spent much of his time in Europe since the end of the World War II. His duties with the World Union of the O. R. T., or Organization for Rehabilitation through Training, had recently kept him in Paris.

A leader for three decades in the O. R. T. movement, Dr. Lvovitch founded the agency's unit in Poland in 1920. The next year, when the World Union was founded in Berlin, he became vice-president. In addition to his long service with European branches of the agency, which sponsors vocational training programs for Jewish workers, he also had assisted the American O. R. T. Federation with its programs.

At the end of the recent war, Dr. Lvovitch organized O. R. T. programs in displaced persons camps in Germany which eventually trained more than 35,000 workers for skilled jobs. Dr. Lvovitch studied engineering, law, and economics in Munich and at the University of St. Petersburg.

Surviving are his widow, Cornelia, and a son, Harry, both residing in Paris.

Oppose U.S. Loan To Spain

Opposition to the proposed U.S. loan to Spain was announced by ten Jewish organizations. They warned that the loan, "far from striking a blow against Communism," would "actually aid the Communist propaganda campaign." The organizations charged that "the Government of Spain is a totalitarian tyranny as evil and anti-democratic as the Communist dictatorship."

Organizations signing the statement were the American Jewish Committee, American Jewish Congress, Association of Jewish Chaplains in the Armed Forces, Bnai Brith, Jewish Labor Committee, Jewish War Veterans of U. S. A., National Community Relations Advisory Council, National Council of Jewish Women, Synagogue Council of America and Union of American Hebrew Congregations.

Declaring that "world Communism is a deadly menace to freedom and peace, which menace must be resisted," the statement said "not all the self-styled enemies of Communism are friends of liberty."

"General Franco," it added, "actively and openly supported the forces that for a time enslaved Europe and sought to destroy all the democracies; in his own country he continued to suppress civil liberties and religious freedom."

FREEDOM IS A CHILD'S WORD, TOO
Freedom is a child's word too . . . freedom to explore, freedom to express himself naturally—more freedom than is possible within the average apartment.

Many parents have found The Lad & Lassie Kindergarten, 1357 Van Horne Ave., Outremont, to be the ideal answer to these problems. Here are provided full facilities for play, trained teachers and approved materials to satisfy your child's growing curiosity, and contact with other children to teach cooperation and provide pleasant companionship.

Jewish Religious Supervision At Scout Camps

At the Ten Mile River Scout Camps, operated by the Greater New York Councils of the Boy Scouts of America, religious supervision ranks topmost in importance on the program. For Scouts of Jewish faith there is a Jewish chaplain at each of the five camps on the 12,000 acre Scout Reservation, with a Jewish chapel for devotional services. Among the 3,600 Scouts at the camps, some 10,000 will spend at least two weeks there during the summer, religion is definitely a part of the Scouting program. Where problems arise Jewish, Protestant and Catholic chaplains jointly arrive at a solution.

For instance, Friday evening services posed one problem because at the same time other activities were being pursued by Scouts of other faiths. So the Catholic and Protestant groups now hold special devotional services on Friday evening, at the same time as the Jewish services. Reciprocally, special Jewish devotional services are held on Sunday morning.

Because certain Scouts require kosher food and dietary observances, special dining halls are provided in several of the camps, under the supervision of a kashruth supervisor appointed by the Rabbinical Council of America. Illustrative of the fellowship in Scouting is the fact that many non-Jewish Scouts eat in the kosher dining halls so that the religious practices of their fellow Scouts can be properly observed without separating them from their Troops. In some cases Negro Scouts use the kosher facilities for this reason.

However, the complete chaplaining program at the camps provides for Scouts of Orthodox, Conservative, and Reformed beliefs. Duties of the chaplains include counseling of the Scouts of Jewish faith, preparation for bar-mitzvah and [illegible] When Scouts arrive at the camps, the chaplains are among the first to greet them and to be sure that each boy meets the chaplain of his own faith. In all cases the Jewish, Protestant, and Catholic chaplains work closely together. For instance, in one of the smaller camps that has no Jewish chaplain, the Protestant chaplain provides transportation for the Jewish Scouts to attend religious services.

Funds for the purchase of religious supplies, Scrolls of the Law, candles, Sabbath wine, educational material and a circulating library are provided by the Jewish Committee on Scouting under the chairmanship of Judge Jonah J. Goldstein, of New York.

Relationship of the Scouting program to religion was clearly summed up in a statement by Public Service Commissioner George A. Arkwright, a Roman Catholic, at the dedication of the Synagogue in the Pines at one of the Ten Mile River Scout Camps in 1949. Commissioner Arkwright stated: "It is an outdoor temple dedicated to Almighty God. It is a monument to the faith of an ancient people. With its Catholic and Protestant closely-neighbored churches, all consecrated to the youth of our country, it is a testament to the brotherhood of man. It is an exemplification of the firm and lasting principle of the Boy Scouts of America to serve all faiths and to respect all creeds. It stands witness to the freedom of worship in a great Republic. It will cast its light upon present and future generations, and will guide and inspire them with the wisdom and commandments of God."

Synagogue Council Supports War Decisions

At a special meeting of the executive committee of the Synagogue Council of America, representing the combined religious bodies of American Jewry, the following statement was adopted unanimously:

"Judaism upholds peace as one of the highest ideals, and views war as tragedy. But there is no peace without justice and human freedom. World Communism and every form of totalitarianism, which repudiates the ethical values affirmed by religion, is seeking to destroy free democratic government through the cynical application of guile and force. Peace-loving peoples gave expression through the Security Council of the United Nations to act with wisdom and full justification in immediately denouncing the invasion of South Korea. They requested to cease fire forthwith and the return by North Korean armies to their own territory which upon refusal to do so justifiably called for united resistance to the invaders. The President of the United States and Congress responded with commendable promptness and vigor to this appeal and other UN members have now given material and moral support to this undertaking.

"We affirm our full endorsement of these decisions. Whatever the mistakes of the past have been, and none of the nations have been wholly blameless, there was no other course to take in the face of armed aggression, ruthless and morally irresponsible. The successful fulfillment of this purpose will require our application not alone of physical, but of moral force. Our policies must demonstrate to the peoples of the world the genuineness of our concern for human rights and liberty.

"Limitless sacrifice is being made by the men who are fighting under the banner of the UN. Similar sacrifice is expected of those who are now being called to the colors. Under such circumstances, it is wicked and disloyal for sheltered civilians to exploit our conditions for their own selfish benefits. We condemn without reserve such practices as hoarding and profiteering. We are confident that the great majority of American citizens share this attitude. But for the restraint of the selfish minority and for the guidance of all Americans, we urge Congress to enact at once such measures of taxation and economic control as will effectively stem inflation and prevent profiteering.

"We call upon our congregations to join with Americans of every faith in fervent prayer that God may guide the leaders of our government and of the UN, and prosper their highest aims. May we with God's help speedily see the day when the unhappy people of Korea achieve security, union and independence as a free nation under a truly democratic government achieved through free elections under the United Nations' supervision and protection. We also pray for peace throughout the world for all peoples based upon justice and freedom which is the fundamental right of all mankind."

Fears Loss Of Jewish Cookery

Mrs. Leah Leonard, author of the recent "Jewish Cookery," admitted her book would have contained much less than 500 pages had she relied entirely on formulas originating with the Jews.

"Most of the dishes that are considered Jewish are so only by adoption," she explained in an interview in New York.

"Blintzes, probably first prepared by the Poles or Russians, are an example. But now, like so many other specialties borrowed from other various nations where the [illegible] they [illegible] associated [illegible] may derive from any one of a number of European countries, according to Mrs. Leonard. In German the word means stuffed fish; in the Balkans the dish is still made by removing the meat in fillets, which are chopped and then quite literally stuffed between the skin and backbone of the fish. The balls of chopped fish served here are "an American mutation."

Foods traceable to an authentic Hebraic beginning are few, notably challah, cholent and hamantaschen. Challah is the braided loaf (originally a coil) served on the Sabbath; cholent is a Sabbath main dish; hamantaschen is associated with Purim.

Mrs. Leonard described cholent as a "meal-in-a-dish," probably first concocted by some ingenious Jewish housewife who wanted to serve a hot dinner on days when cooking is prohibited; in ancient times, the food was kept warm in special vessels for service on the Sabbath. The recipe she gives for it in her new book lists beef, onions, lima beans and potatoes among the ingredients.

Mrs. Leonard pins down the date when hamantaschen was first baked to precisely 165 B. C. Haman was a Persian official who ordered all Jews to be killed on a certain day. Xerxes, the Persian ruler, countermanded the order. And to celebrate their deliverance, the Jews prepared a special, three-cornered sweet tart filled with poppy seed or fruit.

"The very same pastry named after Haman, is baked right here every year," Mrs. Leonard said. "It may be found in local bakeries just before Purim, the holiday in March commemorating this incident."

The Jews have contributed to the cuisines of the various countries where they have settled, Mrs. Leonard lists sour cream, bagels (round bun-like bread) and unsalted butter as some of the foods [illegible] Americans to [illegible]

And how has frying in America affected Jewish cookery?

Mrs. Leonard replied that she thought fewer housewives here knew how to prepare the traditional dishes. She attributed this to the small apartments that provide no room for the grandmother who used to live with the family and teach the young folks how to make such ancient culinary classics as gefilte fish and matzoh sponge cake.

In an interesting section of her new cook book, Mrs. Leonard describes the new Jewish cuisine developing in Israel. Making use of foods readily available there, the people are preparing such Israeli specialties as stuffed squash and apricot soup, says the New York Times.

Lawrence Ehrlich, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Sheldon Merel, of the Bronx, students at the Hebrew Union School of Education and Sacred Music, in New York, were studying this summer on music and voice scholarships of the Brandeis Youth Foundation at its school at San Susannah, Calif., it is announced by Dr. Abraham N. Franzblau, dean of the New York school. A part of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion, it is the only school for cantors in the world. Ehrlich and Merel are preparing for careers in Orthodox, Conservative and Liberal Jewish congregations.

TO HOLD TO RATIONING

The Israeli Government indicated to the Parliament that it was ready to modify the textile and leather several weeks ago, that had aroused stormy opposition from business interests. At the same time Cabinet members told the House: "This is not the end," thus hinting that rationing might be extended over other commodities. The Government agreed to weigh recommendations for revisions in the details of the plan, but persisted in the principle of rationing.

Mrs. Golda Myerson, Minister of Labor, said, the issue was "more immigrants or more shoes," explaining that if foreign exchange was spent for yarn and hides, there would be less money for houses for immigrants. Finance Minister Eliezer Kaplan said priority in the appropriation of foreign exchange must go to the industries that are contributing toward closing the gap between immigration and absorption.

Recently in Israel, a bereaved husband, who was mourning the loss of his wife received a condolence card franked with a stamp which featured the words "Joyous Holidays" as part of its design. According to the Israeli press, the incensed recipient of the condolence card wrote a letter of complaint to his local newspaper and stated that in his particular case there was nothing joyous about losing his wife. The other papers picked up the story and criticized the postal authorities for selling such stamps after the holidays to the unsuspecting public. The Israeli postal authorities, recalled the holidays stamp series from all post offices. These stamps plus all remainders are to be destroyed.

It is best to leave fruits and vegetables whole until just before using. Crushing of berries and slicing and shredding of fruits and vegetables hasten the destruction of vitamin C, one of the major nutrients found in these foods.

Nutritionists say the best way to cook potatoes is to bake them. Baked potatoes lose little of their food value and do retain most of their vitamin C, that elusive vitamin which disappears in ordinary cooking.

THE TORONTO "Y"

BY SIDNEY S. SCHIPPER,
577 BRIAR HILL AVENUE, TORONTO

Did you ever stop to consider that the letter 'Y' is the only one of all twenty-six that properly represents that which goes to make up the Y.M. and Y.W.H.A.? Look at it. If you were asked to describe it to a blind man what would you say? Were you a teacher you might explain. "The letter "Y" looks like two branches growing upward from a common trunk." An excellent description, and true also of that Jewish institution for community gathering known affectionately in Toronto as "The Y". Two branches from a common trunk—reaching upwards; Jewish men and Jewish women reaching to up, freeing themselves from themselves through self-expression, fostered and nurtured and directed by a skilled staff; Jewish boys and Jewish girls grasping their birthright of unhindered growth in mind and body and spirit.

There are nursery schools for the very young; "Good Age" programs for the old. Home Camps in the city; summer camps in the woods; each giving a share of health and well-being to our growing children through the Jewish Camp Council. Athletics on the gym floors, in the swimming pool, and on the playing field; culture in the meeting rooms, in the music center, on the library shelves are at the Y. Citizenship and sharing, balanced with self-respect and initiative, are practiced wholeheartedly in the daily programs of forty clubs.

Pre-marital training and information; post-nuptial guidance and advice are available. Self-recognition, along with an identity as part of a working unit, is offered; also individualism within a group. Two branches from a common trunk reach upwards; two branches stem from the community, rooted in the good earth of cooperation and mutual help that is the United Jewish Welfare Fund and the Community Chest. This is the symbol of the true Jewish Centre, the sign that will support the New Building and be a beacon for the ten thousand Jewish souls which this structure will be capable of serving. This is the symbol that has been so many years in the growing. This is our Centre which has been crystallizing slowly from the many circles of Jewish need and endeavour.

She will join with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, elected to the Board last year, as the only women to serve. Noted particularly for her work in the field of child care, Mrs. Levy is president of the Citizens Committee on Children of New York City and was designated by President Truman to the executive committee of the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth, to be held in December, 1950.

First Duty Is To U.S., Says Hadassah Leader

Hadassah, the women's Zionist organization of America, called on its 300,000 members to support the United Nations in its position against aggression in Korea. The 2,000 delegates attending the annual convention of the organization in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York, unanimously adopted a resolution endorsing the United Nations anti-aggression stand on Korea.

Another resolution urged the immediate ratification by the United States Senate of the United Nations Genocide Convention outlawing destruction of ethnic, racial or religious groups.

Asserting that the prime political obligation of Jews in America must be to the United States, Mrs. Moses P. Epstein, a former national president of Hadassah, pointed out that support of Israel does not involve dual loyalties on their part.

Dr. Mordecai M. Kaplan, Professor of the Philosophies of Religion, Jewish Theological Seminary of America, praised Hadassah for "making Zionism a method whereby American Jews are enabled to live in two civilizations, the American and the Jewish, by combining the best in each, to enrich both."

Dr. Max Lerner, Professor of the American Civilization, Brandeis University, said that Israel is a new big fact about the Middle East for Americans, and he pointed out that the only Middle East policy "which makes sense, is one that will aim at strengthening the democratic allies in the fight against communism and feudalism and will aim also at [illegible] the United Nations."

abroad," he continued. "The Government and the people fully respect the right and integrity of Jewish communities in other countries to develop their own mode of life and their indigenous social, economic and cultural institutions in accordance with their own needs and aspirations.

"Any weakening of American Jewry and disruption of this communal life, any lowering of its sense of security and diminution of its status is a definite loss to Jews everywhere and to Israel, in particular."

He added that Israel's success or failure depended to a large extent on the cooperation with and the strength of the Jewish community in the United States, according to the Times.

"We therefore are anxious that nothing should be said or done which could in the slightest degree undermine the sense of security and stability of American Jewry," he emphasized.

The Premier again appealed to Jews in the United States to bring to Israel their technical knowledge and experience, "but the decision rests with the free discretion of each American Jew himself; it is a matter of his own volition."

Mr. Blaustein, who is a Baltimore oil man, declared that goodwill between the citizens of Israel and those of other countries was a "two-way street" and that "Israel also has a responsiblity in this situation — a responsiblity in terms of not affecting adversely the sensibilities of Jews who are citizens of other states by what it says and does."

He added that American Jews "vigorously repudiate any suggestion or implication that they are in exile."

EIGHT GROUPS

The mass immigration, which has increased the Jewish population from 665,000 when the state was established twenty-seven months ago to 1,126,000, has changed the complexion of the nation. Mr. Shye disclosed that 60 per cent of the immigrants in 1950 had been from Asian and African countries. Orientals now account for 31 per cent of the population compared with 20 per cent in 1948. Eastern families are more prolific and 60 per cent of the population under 17 belongs to the Oriental communities. Hence it is obvious that Western Jews who now dominate the country politically and economically will be in a minority in the near future.

ORT May Expand Field For Girls

Relief of poverty-striken ghettos in North Africa is necessary for the moral and physical survival of a half-million "almost forgotten Jews," Mrs. Ludwig Kaphan, president of the Women's American ORT (Organization for Rehabilitation through Training), said in New York at a press conference held on her return from a three-month survey of ORT projects in North Africa, Israel and Europe. She spoke at the ORT's headquarters at 212 Fifth Avenue.

The largest and worst "mellah," or walled-in-ghetto, where 60,000 Jews live through economic necessity rather than political restriction, is in Casablanca, Mrs. Kaphan said. There the ORT has taken 2,000 young people into schools that give them their first general and technical education. Six thousand have had to be turned away each registration period since the first school was started two years ago.

"The demand for skilled labor in Morocco is such that one person with a skill can earn his living and rescue his entire family from the mellah," Mrs. Kaphan explained. "Many of the students have gone to work before finishing the course.

"In all my visits I have never come across students more determined to learn and to make something of themselves," she declared. Africa's Jew is expected to make a contribution to the nation of Israel, where skilled workers are needed too, Mrs. Kaphan said. Though the ORT has taken some of them to be trained in Israel, the problem can be better met by giving them some useful skill before they leave, she added.

"Our first big job, more important than providing instruction and machinery, has been to get the young people out of the demoralizing atmosphere of the mellah," she said. So far, the ORT has provided in Casablanca one boarding school for boys, a day school for boys and one for girls. A girls' boarding school is expected to be opened in October.

Boys learn carpentry and precision tool-making, two skills in much demand, and the girls just one — sewing, Mrs. Kaphan said, but added that the American women's organization will insist that the field for the girls be expanded to include training in designing, beauty culture, baby care, and dental laboratory work.

Israel represents a direct contrast to North Africa where the Jews are concerned, Mrs. Kaphan said. "The Jew is sure of himself and his future, and has a job to do." ORT is making itself felt through its eleven schools in Israel and its 479 schools in twenty-three countries, from which many students migrate to Israel, she said.

you suggest would be effective in achieving the goal which you have in mind."

In making the announcement that WJC experts were drafting a plan for international supervision, Dr. Israel Goldstein released the text of a letter from Mr. Hay to Dr. Robert S. Marcus, political director of the Western Hemisphere Branch of the WJC. Mr. Hay's letter deals at length with the desecration of Jewish cemeteries in Germany and the steps taken by American authorities to stop this vandalism.

The Congress appealed to the Brazilian Government to expel Herbert Cukars, a former Latvian citizen who recently immigrated to Brazil. Mouricio Nabuco, Brazilian Ambassador to the United States, has been informed in a letter from Dr. Marcus that the organization is in possession of evidence that Cukars, an official of the Gestapo in Riga, Latvia, and a leader of the Latvian Nazi Party, was one of the persons directly in charge of the mass extermination of the Jews of the Riga ghetto.

Dr. Marcus also intervened with the Ambassador in behalf of three Brazilian Jews who were arrested for an alleged attack on the business premises of Cukars, and expressed confidence that the Brazilian Government will understand "the deep bitterness of those who have lost their loved ones through the hands of the Nazis toward one who participated in the extermination of these innocent victims of Hitler's sadism."

The World Jewish Congress, Dr. Marcus wrote, was confident that the Brazilian Government was unfamiliar with Cukar's background at the time it extended sanctuary to the Latvian. A continuation of his stay in Brazil "would not be in keeping with the democratic tradition" of that country and "would be in contravention of the constitution of the International Refugee Organization which explicitly excludes war criminals from the benefit of its provisions," the letter says.

The last of sixty families stranded in Tanganyika during the war will soon depart for Australia, Dr. Goldstein said. In February, 1948, these families who were then residing in a refugee camp in Tengeru, Tanganyika, appealed to the Congress against an IRO decision to close their camp and transfer them to camps in Germany. Protesting against the transfer, they asked instead for an opportunity to settle elsewhere. The Congress obtained the right for several of these families to settle in the United States, and for some to settle in Australia. The majority left for Israel. Abraham Fierstein, his wife and two children, the last of these homeless, are leaving. They fled Poland at the outbreak of the war and landed in Tanganyika, in search of a haven. Prevented from proceeding elsewhere, the end of the war found them stranded in East Africa.

property outright to private entities. Such transactions would require the express consent of the Development Authority, which would have to be satisfied that the property would be used for projects of importance to the state economy. The policy is that aside from the 25,000 acres of urban property that will be sold to earn revenue, the bulk of the property will be used for the development of the country. There are clauses in the new law safeguarding this policy.

In the Knesset (Parliament) debate, the sharpest issue was the question of the sale of property to private buyers. The Leftists demanded that all the land be nationalized, but the Rightists argued that the Government was in effect treating an agrarian nationalization policy underhandedly by restricting the area that could be sold to private buyers. Whatever change in policy there is in the new law would appear to be in the direction of tolerating private ownership of land, according to the Times.

NEW CENTERS IN U.S. TO COST $12,000,000

Fifty-nine Jewish community centers in 55 communities in 24 States embarked on building programs involving the erection of brand new structures or the remodelling of existing facilities with a total estimated cost of $12,000,000 during the year ended August 31, 1950, according to a report by the Building Bureau of the National Jewish Welfare Board, the national association of Jewish community centers. Twenty new or remodelled center buildings costing $5,530,000 are now under construction while 26 other centers completed and occupied new or remodelled buildings costing $4,800,000 during the year ended August 31. Fourteen other centers acquired building sites during the year.

wife, Mrs. Hanna Jacobovits, and their son, Michel, escaped into Switzerland in disguise. In Switzerland he was a chaplain of various refugee camps operated by the Swiss Army. He came to New York in 1946, and since had been associated with the Congregation K'Hall Adath Jeshurun. He had taught Talmudical law in various Jewish academies in Europe and the United States, says the New York Times.

For his congregation and on behalf of many others throughout America he had charge of the ritual supervision of food, making trips to various parts of the United States.

Surviving, besides his widow and son, are four other sons, Gustave, Tobie, Solomon and Emile M. Around the Home...

TOM GARD'S NOTE BOOK

Conservation is a frequently-used word these days in Ontario. Nor are we awakening to the seriousness of the situation a minute too soon. The increasing evidence of soil erosion, floods and poor soil management is appalling. As I travel the province, the signs of increased pride in our homes thrills me but bare hillsides, deep gulleys and rich soil deposited in hollows modify my feelings of jubilation.

Even the urban dweller can do his part to help the situation by maintaining soil fertility and planting trees. There is no need to wait until next spring to plant one, as most will do well when planted in September.

Andirons

If you look longingly at andirons and fire baskets for your fireplace but decide they're still beyond the budget, try this simple suggestion picked up while visiting a friend's cottage. An old steel tire rim had been picked up at a junk yard and cut with a hack-saw as shown in the illustration. Placed in the fireplace, the rim was particularly effective and not unattractive. The open space permitted good draught and the rim made the task of cleaning out the ashes much lighter.

Jewel Boxes

Christmas is still a long way off but at least one person is thinking about it. I found my sister making jewel boxes as Yuletide gifts for a few of her friends. Tin powder boxes and cardboard cheese boxes were being transformed into attractive jewel cases. The bright plaid covering on some of the boxes was as eye-catching as the frugalness of the idea.

Ski Holder

If you have tripped over your skis all summer as they reclined in the corner of the garage, you'll be receptive to a suggestion for their storage. Try hanging them between the studs as shown in the illustration. I did and it has been marvellous.
